Class of '59: From Bailey to Wooller: The Golden Age of County Cricket

Chris Westcott : Class of '59: From Bailey to Wooller: The Golden Age of County Cricket before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Class of '59: From Bailey to Wooller: The Golden Age of County Cricket:

In 1959, a unique set of collectable cards was produced to celebrate the careers of 50 of the leading cricketers of the day. These cards are now very rare and hugely sought after. This book commemorates the 40th anniversary of the cards' first appearance, reproducing each of the 50 originals in detail. They are accompanied by present-day interviews with the cricketers concerned, in which they look back over the glory days of their career and comment on the future of the game. The late '50s and early '60s were a golden age in English cricket history, and the roll call of those featured hereamong them such greats as Trevor Bailey, Fred Truman, Alec Bedser, and Brian Close reads like a hall of fame.
