EdelmanGun Digest is of course required reading for all gun hobbyists, and especially for collectors and history buffs. The periodic "Treasure" collections contain an entertaining cross section of stories and articles from over the years that both give a glimpse into an era and provide valuable historic information. This particular volume contains (among other pieces) a remembrance of the famous John Amber, a name that will be familiar to all long-time readers of outdoor magazines; Amber himself, writing on gun collecting; a run-down of the most popular million-selling sporting guns of the modern era; Col. Townsend Whelen on the Springfield; Frank de Haas on the Sharps; Elmer Keith on handgun hunting; a report on the on-going trials to select the US Army's next main battle rifle to replace the Garand,
